A 72-year-old grandmother, Medinat Ala, and her tenant were on the early hour of Wednesday gruesomely murdered by some suspected ritualists who removed her vital organs in Ikare Akoko, headquarters of Akoko North East Local Government area of Ondo State.

Some of the vital parts removed from the septuagenarian by the suspected ritualists included her breast, womb, oesophagus and her virginal, while the other woman died from the injuries sustained during the attack.

It was gathered that the other victim who was a tenant to the septuagenarian came out of her room when she suspected some movement within the house situated at Okeegbe area of the town.

According to a source, the assailants hit the two women with a pestle and removed the vital organs of Madam Ala while they left the other woman unconscious in the passage of the house.

The tenant was said to have attempted to raise alarm to attract neighbours while the suspects hit her on the head with the pestle.

He, however, said that the suspect carried out the operation unhindered and left without leaving any traces behind before discovering the bodies of the two victims in the morning.

The woman was said to have been rushed to the hospital but eventually gave up at the hospital.
