A woman has reportedly died in Bare village of Numan Local Government Area of Adamawa State, following attacks by gunmen suspected to be herdsman.

The attack, according to a local government official, took place late Friday night.

The official, who pleaded for anonymity, also confirmed that security operatives comprising soldiers and policemen have been deployed to the area and that they have since quelled the raid.

She, however, stated that "no arrest has been made so far."

Dominique Yohanna, a resident of Bare, had initially informed SaharaReporters about the late night attack, but could not provide further details.

However, Madam Johannah, Numan local council boss, said the woman was allegedly killed on the outskirts of the village on her way back from a local market.

Apostle Hiram, another resident of Bare, said "she was killed by herdsman who were in possession of dangerous weapons. It is confirmed that the herdsman used machetes to decapitate her body," he added.

Hiram, who is a local pastor in the area, further lamented thus: "Bare is under siege, all routes linking Bare to other communities around the area have been taken over by herdsman."
