

UPDATE: Tears As Remains Of Drowned Delta Poly Graduate Found Floating In River

By Ebenezer Adurokiya - ... On Jan 30, 2021

LATEST NEWS

About 48 hours after drowning, the remains of Delta State Polytechnic graduate, Mr. Friday Abiligo Orhomre, has been found and buried amid tears and wailing.

The blooming graduate of Mechanical Engineering from Otefe Polytechnic, Oghara, drowned at Ughoton river last Thursday while returning home on a boat from his farm with his mother and siblings.

His mother and siblings, who were together with him in the ill-fated boat, however, survived the mishap by navigating to the shore of Ughoton river which is located in Okpe Local Government Area of Delta State.

Reports say the late Orhomre's remains were found floating on the pipeline section of Ughoton river on Saturday morning after days of fruitless efforts by divers.

His remains were reportedly interred in a jiffy following a brief funeral that was characterised by grief and tears among his family members and well-wishers who described him as industrious, intelligent, humble, loving and creative.

---

ALSO READ: Environmental sanitation: Oyo apprehends 40 persons, impounds 50 vehicles, 75 motorcycles

---

The young man, who rounded off his NYSC in October, 2020, was said to have initially objected to making the ill-fated trip to the farm, but was encouraged to do so unknown that that would be his last.