A young man identified as Jimoh Ejo, has been arrested while trying to escape by the Oyo State Police Command, for allegedly beating a 51-year-old man Ahmed Kamoru to death last weekend. Saturday Mirror learnt at the State Special Anti-Robbery Squad that the incident occurred at Ile Alagbede, Oke- Agbeni area of Ibadan last Sunday while Jimoh was trying to escape from those pursuing him after he was caught burgling a sugar shop located at popular Agbeni market. It was gathered that one of the children of the deceased children, Afeez , was busy helping his mother to repair a kiosk in front of their house around 4.00p.m on the fateful day when fleeing Jimoh suddenly pushed him down. The 30-year-old Afeez then grabbed Jimoh and demanded for an apology from him, but the refusal of Jimoh, who was in haste to get away from the scene before those pursuing him arrived, to apologise led to fisticuffs. It was during the fight that the 51-yearold Afeez's father, who had been observing the Ramadan fasting, came out of the house to intervene in the fight between his son and the intruder. It was further learnt that it was while the deceased was trying to settle the quarrel that the suspect hit him at the private part with leg, and that the man immediately fell down.

But Afeez seeing that his father had been injured by Jimoh, held on to him and called the attention of the people around to the scene, and it was at this point that the suspect reportedly picked a heavy stone from the ground to scare people away.

While others at the scene, including Afeez ran for dear life, the deceased could not run away, and as a result of this, the furious Jimoh allegedly hit him on the head with the stone, and the man died immediately.
