thenews | August 15, 2011 | 0 Comments

TWO suspected Boko Haram gunmen, yesterday, shot and killed an Islamic cleric, Liman Bana, 65, in Ngala, a border community town with Chad, 140 kilometres Northeast of Maiduguri, the Borno State capital.

The suspected gunmen had trailed the cleric right from the Ngala Central Mosque to his residence, before firing several gunshots into his chest and head.

According to eyewitnesses, the killers fled to Gambouru, a border community town with Chad on a motorbike.

Confirming the incident, Borno State Police Public Relations Officer, Abubakar Kabiru, said:

“I received the reports of the Boko Haram gunmen’s attacks and killing from International News Agencies.

Since it is a non-working day none of our superior officers is in the office to receive reports and confirmation of the assassination of Ngala cleric that was killed in the night of Saturday in Ngala.”

He said that the 65-year old Islamic cleric was killed in the presence of his wives and children.

Kabiru told The Guardian that even though there were no arrests, investigations have commenced following the information provided by some residents to the police on the identity and direction the suspects fled after killing the cleric.
