Three feared killed as violence erupts again in

By Agency Reporter, Published: Tuesday, 9 Mar 2010

Violence again erupted in the troubled town of Ijoko-Ota, Ogun State, on Monday for the second time in 10 days as some unidentified hoodlums allegedly shot and killed three people in the town.

Penultimate Saturday, some hoodlums, said to be acting on the order of a man trying to enforce the judgment of the Supreme Court over the ownership of a vast land in the area, allegedly shot and killed one Ayodele Ibrahim, while the opposition by residents of the town resulted in a communal unrest.

The Police Public Relations Officer in the state, Mr. Olumuyiwa Adejobi, confirmed the clash at Ijoko, but said that only one person, named Bashiru, was killed while his wife was shot but could not confirm the condition of the woman.

Adejobi said, "This man did not die in a free-for-all unlike the one that happened the other Saturday. Bashiru was called out of his residence this morning while the wife followed him. He was shot in front of his residence by some hoodlums while the wife sustained gunshot wounds. I can tell you that only one person died."

Nigeria is now dangerous than Afghanistan, no wonder America put Nigeria on terrorist lists. I am pretty sure that some wealthy Nigerians knows about the massacre. Shola Oremade Canada

It is very disheartening seeing what is happening in the country today. You cannot imagine that 416 people were given mass burial in Jos, Plateau State yesterday. In Ijoko Ota, Ogun State we have controversial figure of 1 or 3 people killed. Where are we heading to as per this sacrificial killings being witnessed today in this great country of ours. The Federal Govt should spontaneously respond to their clarion call and put sanity within the system. Thanks

Let government do the right thing they surpose to do about this matter in Ijoko Ota.....Like four year back now the crises had be on but the government does do take the right step...Surbeme court is highest court of law in Nigeria, but government don't allow the judgement of the surpeme court to happen in Ijako Ota.....So pls government do the right thing to allow peace to back to the town
