One killed as bandits invade Ogun Gov's office

February 18, 2012 by Agency Reporter

After a lull in their nefarious activities, armed robbers on Friday renewed their activities in Ogun State and took their battle to the state's seat of power in Abeokuta.

A four-man robbery gang invaded the Governor's Office, Oke-Mosan, and attempted to steal a Toyota Camry car with registration number Ogun AKM 146 AA.

The vehicle was parked behind the Ministry of Education, Science and Technology, which is located near the Governor's Office in the state secretariat.

It was learnt that the robbers struck around 9.40 am in a black Nissan Quest car with an Abuja number plate BK 944 RSH.

But in their attempt to steal the car, the vehicle's security system triggered off.

The development attracted the attention of the car owner – a civil servant – who consequently raised the alarm and alerted other workers within the premises of the ministry.

Sensing danger, the robbers made a desperate move to escape from the scene and drove towards the main gate of the secretariat.

The suspects rammed their vehicle through the gate but a policeman, who was said to have laid in ambush, shot one of the robbers in the thigh.

The robbers were said to have abandoned their vehicle and fled into the bush opposite the complex.

It was, however, learnt that a reinforcement team of the Special Anti-Robbery Squad, which joined in chasing the bandits, killed one of them.

Governor Ibikunle Amosun, who incidentally was in his office when the robbers struck, expressed surprise at the effrontery of the men of the underworld.

He lauded the gallantry of the security operatives in foiling the robbery and restated the commitment of his administration towards improving the security situation in the state.

“This is part of what we met on ground. I told you before that to buy guns in Ogun State is easier than to buy water or a bottle of Coca-cola and that is the example of what we have seen. Imagine if people now have the effrontery to come into the secretariat; it is unheard of,” Amosun said.

The Commissioner of Police, Nicholas Nkemdeme, said the command had already launched an investigation into the incident.

“This is one of the most embarrassing situations I have ever met; for armed robbers to enter the Government House. I don't know what they wanted and I am very happy that my boys gave them what they wanted,” he said.

security is most of the greatest problems facing ogun state, the poor government policies, corruption and bad leadership caused all these problems. the government needs to provide adequate security and generate full for employment with social benefit for youth people, who are looking for job. the level of poverty is high, above 70 per cent lack basic facilities and living below $2 per day.

How come that they were not searched by the gate before entering? Well the governor should count himself lucky because this is what ordinary Nigerian go through every day. Mr Commissioner there is no point applauding your boys they should be queried for not searching that car properly if not they should have seen them.

It's a very good occurrence.....this will show our public office holders that they are not invisible after all they surround themselves and members of their families with army of armed security escorts which is not necessary if their is enough security in the country for the whole public. The classic spirit of oppression is still in the mind of 99% of our politicians and civil servants (security chiefs included) unfortunately these warped / twisted minded people make our security + economic policies and they are also in charge of implementation these policies. I pity the average nigerian on the streets including my humble self because our politicians are corrupt and sick minded people, during election period i observe that the list of candidates are just a long line of all calibers of thieves and the people are given the destructive option of electing one of the thieves on display by INEC. nigerians should not expect anything good from all these politicians in power or presently in opposition parties because they are all after all the billions they can steal from our treasury, it's the same whole story please tell me how many of all these thieves are genuinely legally prosecuted as at when due. EFCC is just a comedy club; awada kerikeri + nkem owoh + ichioku + samanja + kootu ashipa. the only set of politicians that end up on public display in our courts are the ones that fell out of favor with any big thief that may be in power at aso rock, our courts are nothing but shady markets where judgements are being traded for cash by the same people that are employed to uphold the law....it's a very sad situation. the disintegration of the whole country is in process now and people are still divided based on tribal and religious sentiments...it's very likely that the whole country may go up in smoke like somalia because the smoke already started in the north and other neighbours in the other parts of the country presently feel it's northern issue instead of seeking a genuine solution to the problem...nigeria degenerated from being one of the safest and most stable countries in the world to one that is now known to be in the league of dangerous and politically unstable countries like somalia, afghanistan, pakistan etc...i pray that we all wake up like the arabs did and drive away all these thieves in power and even in opposition so that we can put them in their right place which is in the maximum security prison and confiscate all their assets.

Most Nigerians appear mentally short-circuited when it comes to crime and security threats. Those bandits, are they really armed robbers and were merely at the secretariat to steal a car? Of all places, some bandits would be so dumb as to think the easiest place for them to steal a car in broad daylight is a place close to the governor's office? I don't know what to believe. The security situation everywhere in this country is so fluid, this is a place anything can happen. Someday we will wake up only to be told some Nigerian robbers have gone up to steal in heaven.

Wonders will end not in this great nation of ours. If these hoodlums happened to be Boko Haram, most people present would likely have met their death. This tells that security in this country is zero.

This is to say we lack security in Nigeria, if not how could armed robbers invaded Gov. Office. Well Amosun should not be surprised bcas this and many more are what majority are facing in the state. In this case adequate security must be provided in the state. Anyway, thank God that the policemen were able to kill one of them.
