Corpses of drowned fisherman recovered in Osun

January 17, 2013 by Tunde Odesola, Osogbo 4 Comments

The corpse of an unidentified fisherman, who drowned at Osun River in Gbodofon, along Gbongan-Ibadan road, Osogbo, on Friday, has been recovered.

A statement by a Director in the state Ministry of Information and Strategy, Mr. Dapo Ajayi, said the fisherman drowned during a fishing expedition.

According to the statement, security agents made efforts to recover the corpse but did not succeed.

An eyewitness, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said she saw the fisherman slip into the river.

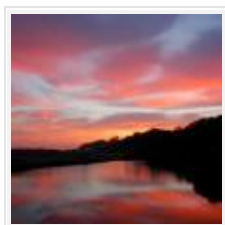

The Commissioner for Culture and Tourism, Mr. Sikiru Ayedun, said the state government would construct a wall to prevent access to the river by members of the public.

“The Rauf Aregbesola administration is a responsive government that will protect the people at all times. For our administration, the masses come first,” he said.

Ayedun, who visited the river on Friday, expressed condolence to the family of the fisherman just as he advised members of the public who could not swim to stay away from the river.

Sorry for those of you who believe in church. i discovered that church has nothing good to offer when i was 15 years old. even in times of problems and temptation i have always believe in myself and baba God. never gave a shit about any pastor and reverend fathers and their teachings that end with the more you give the more receive hooligans!!!! whose shares no dey fall. believe in your abilities and your creator but remember that problems and sufferings are inevitable and inescapable human phenomenon. don't pay tight or Taite and religious fraud will end abruptly but still help people who are created in the image of the Jah (My big Papa God) he said i should love you whether you are black or white unconditionally. To God abro (brother) i love you too much. moreover God don tell me sey he no dey shop Naira but POUNDS so why waste you little hard earned corrupt naira
