Two people have been killed on Friday in fresh attack by gunmen in Wase Local Government of Plateau State.

The over 20 gunmen were said to have launched the attack on Nbiyak village in Kadarko district of Wase. Nbiyak is a community inhabited by the Tarok ethnic group.

They were said to have shot sporadically into the air as residents fled the village. They set many houses ablaze. At the end of the attack which lasted about an hour, two people were killed.

A member of the community, Samuel Wuyep who confirmed the attack to newsmen, said that the attack came after rumours that the community was to be attacked.

He said, "There have been rumour that some people suspected to be Fulani were planning to attack our village. We reported the rumour to security agencies in the area but they ignored the threat."

The attack was actually carried out as rumored and they killed two people, I also know some people are missing and have not been found.

Spokesman of the Special Task Force , Captain Salisu Mustapha was not available for comments.
