

many hold the view that the death of one at his prime, particularly in a controversial circumstance, is the most painful. In many cases, such deaths have resulted in unpleasant consequences.

① It is therefore not surprising that students of the University of Ibadan on Saturday protested the death of one of their colleagues, Taiwo Shittu, who reportedly died in a controversial manner. Her assailant reportedly raped and murdered her.

③ Suspected cult members in Lagos on February 3 murdered the student.
