Missing ex-cult leader found dead

Samson Folarin

THIRTY-year-old Godwin Victor, aka Sangba, who was abducted by members of his former cult group for embracing normal life, has been found dead.

It was learnt that Sangba's hands and legs were tied, while a log of wood was also tied to his neck before he was thrown into the Lagoon.

Policemen reportedly recovered his corpse around the UNILAG waterfront on Thursday.

Our correspondent had reported last Friday that Sangba had quit his group due to fear for his safety and police harassment.

Some of his friends, who did not support his decision, attacked him.

He was said to have moved to Port Harcourt after increased threats to his life.

However, when he came back to check his family, he was abducted.

The family had reported at the Bariga Police Division, after which the police started looking for him.

A police source said, "The man has been killed. His two hands and legs were tied with ropes. The cult guys tied a heavy log of wood to his neck and threw him into the Lagoon. His corpse was recovered around the UNILAG waterfront."

The Police Public Relations Officer, Kenneth Nwosu, also confirmed the development.

He said, "His wife reported a case of missing person to the police on Monday. Since then, we had been out looking for him until on Thursday when we were informed that a corpse was found inside the Lagoon. It turned out to be him."

Nwosu said the victim's remains had been deposited in a mortuary, while the matter had been transferred to the State Department of Criminal Investigation.

Keeps management Lagos agencies owned agencies and parastatals are not affected by the dissolution of boards of parastatals and agencies as recently directed by the state Governor, Mr. Akinwunmi Ambode.

"The state government also says that the state House of Assembly Commission is exempted from the dissolution directive.

"The governor had on Monday approved the dissolution of all boards of parastatals and agencies of government in the state with the exemption of the Lagos State Civil Service Commission, Judicial Service Commission and the Lagos State Independent Electoral Commission.

"The clarification, however, becomes necessary because of wrong interpretations given to the announcement of the dissolution."
