

When PUNCH Metro got to the area on Monday, Segun's younger brother, Abiodun, said the gunmen warned his brother's apprentice in the shop to cooperate, or else they would also kill her.

Abiodun added that the police had yet to arrest any suspect.

He said, "It was exactly at 20 minutes to 12pm that we heard the gunshots. My brother was in his shop. He was working when the four men walked in like customers, and pointed guns at him.

"There was a woman and a little girl in the shop with him. The gunmen warned the woman that if she made any noise, they would kill her and the girl. After killing my brother, they started shooting into the air.

"Segun was married with two children. His wife and children have been taken to a safe place. He grew up in this compound and had been working here for as long as I can remember. The assailants walked in like customers."
