

Delta boy kills father for questioning crop harvest

Kindly share this story:

By Matthew Ochei

17th October 2022

Map of Delta State

A man in his late 20s identified simply as Kido in Issele-Uku, in the Aniocha North Local Government Area of Delta State, has been arrested for allegedly killing his father.

PUNCH Metro gathered that Kido allegedly stabbed his father to death on their farmland in Issele-Uku area.

A source said the incident happened when the suspect was confronted by his father for harvesting crops without permission.

“Kido stabbed his father to death and the community vigilantes have arrested him and handed him over to the police.

Related News

Suspected addict stabs one, injures other in Osun

Lady nabbed for allegedly stabbing boyfriend to death

Ogun man kills wife, burns corpse with iron

“But in his confession, the suspect said he did not stab his father but only used firewood on him in self-defence while he (father) threatened him (son) with a cutlass,” the source said.

The state Police Public Relations Officer, DSP Bright Edafe, said the suspect was in custody while investigation was ongoing.

He said, “The son was arrested immediately and he is in detention. They were quarrelling on the farm and unfortunately he killed his father.”