

Lagos hoodlums stab man to death, steal phone

29th December 2022

Lagos State map

By Deji Lambo

Kindly share this story:

Hoodlums have allegedly stabbed a man, Peter Nnamdi, to death, after invading a shanty in the Ebute Metta area of Lagos State.

PUNCH Metro gathered that normal activities were ongoing when the hoodlums invaded the area around 9.05pm on Tuesday.

The gang was said to have attempted to dispose Nnamdi of his mobile phone before stabbing him in the neck and ribs.

It was learnt that residents, who saw Nnamdi lying on the ground in a pool of blood, rushed him to the Ebute Metta General Hospital for treatment.

Related News

Lagos engages private firms for hospitals' inspection

Lagos Labour Party gets new chairman

Lagos provides drugs for health scheme beneficiaries

However, despite attempts by a doctor to rescue Nnamdi, he succumbed to the injuries he sustained during the attack.

Our correspondent gathered that the case was reported at the nearest police station and policemen were detailed to the crime scene.

The state Police Public Relations Officer, SP Benjamin Hundeyin, did not take his calls and had yet to respond to a text message on the incident as of the time this report was filed.