Kwara barber nabbed over girlfriend's death during sex

Tunde Oyekola Ilorin

THE Kwara State Police Command has arrested a middle aged man who is operating a barbing salon in Ilorin, the state capital, over a girl who allegedly died during a sex romp on Monday.

The police who confirmed the incident on Tuesday said that it had commenced investigation into the cause of the death of the lady, who allegedly died after a sex romp with her boyfriend in a guest house in Ilorin.

Investigation revealed that the incident happened on Monday at a guest house situated at the Temidire community, Offa Garage area in the metropolis, while it was reported that the middle aged man, said to own a barbing salon, went for relaxation with his girlfriend.

An unconfirmed report from members of the community also alleged that the man was under the influence of drug with the aim of impressing his girlfriend before the experience turned sour.

"The girl was said to have got tired during the mating and later gave up the ghost.

"During the outing, the girl was said to have been tired and became unconscious. It was at this point that the lady became helpless and thereafter gave up the ghost."

The sources said that the man raised the alarm when the lady reportedly became unconscious and thus attracted workers of the guest house. The lady was said to have been rushed to a nearby hospital where she was confirmed dead.

It was also gathered that when the owner of the guest house reported the incident at the Police 'A' Division, Ilorin, the middle aged man was subsequently arrested.

The Police Public Relations Officer, SP Okasanmi Ajayi,

• Kwara CP, Victor Olaiya

who confirmed the incident, said that the police had commenced full investigation into the incident.

"The incident is true. The state police command has arrested the man involved while full investigations have commenced to know what actually happened between the man and the deceased".

A recent downpour has caused another flood scare for residents of flood-prone communities as the Ogun-Oshun River Basin Authority considers releasing another round of water from the Oyan River Dam.

PUNCH Metro learnt that the dam management alerted some stakeholders in the flood-prone communities about the development.

The chairman of the Riverview Estate in Isheri, Abayomi Akinde, told our correspondent on Tuesday that the move might lead to another flood crisis in the area.

Residents of communities at Isheri, Arepo, Lafenwa, Warewa, and other adjoining areas along the Lagos-Ibadan Expressway in Ogun State were displaced by the flood caused by an excessive release of water from the Oyan Dam.

Abiodun Nejo, Ado Ekiti

A 13-year-old girl died in the collapse of an ancient building in Igede Ekiti, headquarters of Irepodun/Ifelodun Local Government Area, on Tuesday.

Sources said about four residents of the house were injured in the incident and receiving medical attention in hospitals.

One of the children of the landlord, Lanre Olagunju, said that the incident occurred around 2am on Tuesday adding that one casualty was recorded.

Olagunju spoke during the visit of the state governor, Mr Biodun Oyebanji, who was represented by the deputy governor, Mrs Monisade Afuye, to the scene.

He said, "The building didn't give prior notice or sign before the sudden collapse".

The governor, who grieved over the 13-year old girl's death, described the incident as devastating and agonising as he called on occupants of dilapidated buildings across the state to relocate to save their lives.

He said, "This is one incident that really saddened my heart. How could we lose a precious human life to such an avoidable circumstance? The building must have been giving some signs for long.

"If you check very well, the adjoining buildings are not even safe. The government agents will visit here soon to assess those houses and probably pull them down.

"I sympathise with the family and admirers of the victims. This is indeed a trying time for all of us, but we must learn one or two lessons from this and take actions
