The lifeless body of a yet-to-be-identified woman has been reportedly found in a bush along Amaraku-Umudim Road in Isiala-Mbano Local Government Area of Imo State.

PUNCH Metro gathered that the deceased woman was pregnant and her upper garment removed by his attackers.

The incident, our correspondent learnt, happened on the early hours of Tuesday and the woman's identity had remained unknown to the public.

A villager who spoke to PUNCH Metro on condition of anonymity because he was not permitted to speak to the media, said the woman had no blood stain as to be said to be hacked down by assailants.

The source said, "It happened in the morning of Tuesday. The woman was killed and dumped in the bush along Amaraku-Umudim Road. She was pregnant and was stripped naked of her upper wear.

"But the confusing thing is that she did not sustain any blood stain as to link her death to assassins or gunmen. We are yet to find out exactly what led to her death."

When contacted, the Imo State Police Command's spokesman, Henry Okoye, said he had yet to be briefed on the matter but promised to revert to PUNCH Metro as soon as the command got information on it.

He did not get back to our correspondent as of the time of filing this report.
