

Fans, friends mourn four gospel artistes killed in Ogun accident

Johnson Idowu

FANS and friends of four gospel artistes who died in an accident along the Sagamu-Ikorodu Expressway on Saturday have taken to social media to express their condolences over the death of the singers.

PUNCH Metro reports that the musicians, including Kekere Jesu, lost their lives in a fatal motor accident along the expressway.

The Public Education Officer of the Ogun Sector Command of the Federal Road Safety Corps, Florence Okpe, had earlier confirmed the incident in a statement.

Okpe identified the deceased as Evangelist Ayodeji Kekerejesu, Evangelist Iyanu Joseph, Monjolajesu Oluwapamilerin, and Opeyemi Adesina.

According to the FRSC, the crash occurred when the vehicle conveying the gospel singers collided with another, resulting in a high-impact accident that killed all four occupants.

She disclosed that preliminary investigations attributed the crash to overspeeding and poor visibility on the highway, leading to a multi-vehicle collision that claimed no fewer than 24 lives.

The gospel musicians were reportedly on their way to a ministration when the incident happened.

•Kekere Jesu

The death of gospel artistes attracted tributes from fans and friends across social media platforms.

A Facebook user, Victor Odeyale, described the incident as heart-wrenching.

“Heart-wrenching, may the Lord comfort their family and loved ones. Untimely death is nullified in Jesus’ name. Amen.”

Walshak Kos wrote, “They are gospel ministers and evangelists but they still died through accident. They must have prayed against evil during their prayer time but it still happened.

“This shows life is complicated. Sometimes you can do everything right and still get it wrong. You can pray hard and evil still happens to you. Life is just complicated. We only survive by grace, not by strength.”