Jakande's Cousin Killed In Lagos Gang War

ASTROJEWoola

As the gang war between Epetedo youths on Lagos Island entered its fifth day yesterday, Mr. Wasiu a.k.a. Sugar, a cousin of Chief Ibikunle Adio Basly, the Oluwo Jakande of Lagos Island, has been killed by a faction of the warring youths.

Wasiu was stabbed to death at Onda area of Lagos while returning from work.

According to sources at the scene of the incident, the youth was pursued by a group of people with machete until they caught up with him at a junction where he was brutally murdered.

Investigations revealed that Wasiu was just an unfortunate target the rampaging youths at Epetedo who ignored several interventions by the Police

Committee (PCRC) in the area.

Several people have been killed recently in the wake of clashes between supporters of the Peoples Democratic Party and Action Congress.

Speaking with P.M. News at his palace, Chief Ibikunle Adio Basly said: "I and some elders unlawful exclusion of candidates and electoral irregularities.

within Epetedo have called for a truce between the warring factions. I personally asked them to tell us what they needed so that the matter could be settled amicably once and for all. Yet they have decided to continue with their violence."

Meanwhile, Wasiu's body has been deposited at the mortuary in the Lagos State General Hospital.
