A 41-year-old woman, popularly known as Indomie, died inside a pit latrine at her 21, Sarumi Street, Oniwaya, Agege, Lagos, residence, yesterday.

She fell into the latrine while defecating at about 8.30 a.m. and died few minutes after she was rescued by men of the Lagos State Fire Safety Service, who arrived the venue with two vehicles. Her body was later taken away by policemen from the Dopemu police division, in a vehicle marked NPF 9526 B.

According to a source, "if the rescue team had arrived on time, she wouldn't have died. We called them immediately the incident happened but they didn't come on time." P.M.NEWS gathered that she fell into the latrine because the planks used in covering it were weak.

"When she screamed, the husband rushed out from the bathroom and attempted to help, but when both of them were about drowning, the man left her," a witness told P.M.NEWS. P.M.NEWS further gathered that since the owner of the two-storey building, which was formerly called Olasuwon Hotel, died, the twin buildings have been in a dilapidated state. When our reporter visited the scene of the incident, none of her relatives were around to speak on her identity.
