A pregnant woman, Abiodun Odusoga, 32, died early yesterday as a result of complication arising from an alleged attack by an Okada rider, Kenneth Ikeache.

P.M.News learned that Odusoga, who was nine months pregnant, was attacked on 23, March, 2009, in front of her house, 102, Yaya Abatan Street, Ogba, during an argument.

Investigations revealed that disagreement started on the fateful day when the deceased, a telephone recharge card seller, allegedly rebuked Ikeache, who was riding his Okada through a wrong way near her umbrella stall.

In the heat of the argument, the Okada rider and his passenger, Femi Ojoji, were said to have descended on Mrs. Odusoga, beating her mercilessly.

Her husband, Kayode Odusoga, who came to her rescue, was also attacked.

Investigations further revealed that the late Biola Odusoga, who was in coma, was later taken to Consonant Hospital where she spent about four days. She died after she was discharged from the hospital.

The case was said to have been reported at the Area 'G' Police Command.

Kayode Odusoga, the husband of the deceased, and the complainant, who was also detained in Area 'G' for two days, said that his wife, who was always complaining of pains after the attack, went into labour on Monday, but died yesterday morning before the delivery.

The remains of the late Biola Odusoga has been deposited at the LOTAD mortuary.

A medical report, from Lagos State University Teaching Hospital (LASUTH) Ikeja, a Consultation Request Referral Letter, sent to Island Maternity Centre, from LASUTH, revealed that she had been draining liquor with abdominal pain.

Kayode Odusoga told P.M.News that he has gone back to Area 'G' Police Command to inform them about the latest development and that he is yet to get a response.
