A policeman attached to a new generation bank along Okpara Avenue, Enugu, has killed his colleague, Police Sergeant Anslem Onyeishi from Central Police Station Division in error.

Another inspector was also seriously injured when he went there in response to a distress call about an armed robbery attack at the bank which turned out to be false.

Trouble started during an invasion of the bank by students of Enugu State University of Science and Technology, ESUT, who were trying to meet the deadline in paying their school fees.

The deadline ended that day, 31 March and defaulters were to pay N5,000 fine.

The computer network system of the bank was said to be very slow to the dislike of the students who protested after being there for several hours.

At this juncture, a staff of the bank allegedly pressed the alarm that alerts the police about an armed robbery attack without the knowledge of policemen guarding the bank. Immediately, policemen from the Central Police Station responded to the distress. They stormed the bank unnoticed but they were surprised to see that there was no attack on the bank.

P.M.NEWS gathered that it was in the course of their surveillance among the students that one of the policemen attached to the bank sited his colleague with a gun and instantly gunned the sergeant down in error.

The Enugu State Police Command spokesman, Assistant Superintendent of Police [ASP] Ebere Amaraizu confirmed the incident in an interview with P.M.NEWS.

“The death came as a result of answering a distress call alarm on bank robbery raised by the bank without recourse to policemen attached to the bank. There was firing which led to the death of Sergeant Anslem Onyeishi and one other inspector seriously wounded,” said Amaraizu.

According to him, “the command has ordered the Criminal Investigation Department [C.I.D] to investigate the action and find out how it occurred and who did what. The
