

review from time to time, the revenue allocation formula and principles in operation to ensure conformity with changing realities."

Landslide kills two students of same parents in Kogi

Two teenage students of the same parents have been killed by landslide in Olamaboro Local Government Area of Kogi State.

According to reports, the students had gone for menial jobs at the site to enable them raise funds to compliment the little they had collected from their parents for their financial needs in school.

The source who said the rain that fell the previous day compounded the situation as attempts to rescue the students by community members failed.

(Faint handwritten notes on yellowed paper)