The Lagos State Command of the Federal Road Safety Commission (FRSC) on Friday said that 16 persons died in 22 road accidents during the just-concluded festive season. The Sector Commander, Mr Chidi Nkwonta, disclosed this in an interview with the News Agency of Nigeria (NAN) in Lagos.

Nkwonta added that 56 persons were injured in various accidents between Dec. 19, 2013 and Jan. 1.

He said the command booked 2,206 offenders for 2,443 traffic offences in its end-of-the-year special patrol on four major highways.

According to him, the highways, which fell within the jurisdiction of the Lagos State Command, are Lagos-Ibadan, Lagos-Abeokuta, Lekki-Epe and Badagry Expressways.

Nkwonta said the number of deaths recorded were fewer when compared to previous years, which he attributed to the success of the 'Operation Zero Tolerance' introduced to reduce road crashes.

He explained that nine lives were lost on Dec. 21 on Lekki-Epe axis, while seven died on Lagos-Ibadan Expressway and other routes.

"Basically fewer lives were lost this year due to massive deployment of my officers. A total of 2,500 officers are deployed; we also received support from individuals and corporate bodies.

"We organise series of public enlightenment campaigns and motor park rallies in the build up to the end-of-the year.

"Unfortunately, we had the first major crash on Dec. 21, on Lekki-Epe route, which claimed nine lives.

"Apart from that we had a few other crashes that claimed seven," Nkwonta said.

Nkwonta disclosed that the command also collaborated with the National Emergency Management Agency (NEMA) and received donations from individuals and corporate organisations to achieve the success.

"NEMA gave us heavy duty mobile clinics and ambulances and the Hospital Management Board also assisted us," Nkwonta said.

The sector commander urged the road users to obey traffic regulations, adding that the
