An octogenarian stalwart of the Peoples Democratic Party (PDP) in Ile-Ife, Osun State, Taiwo Ogundele, was at the weekend, assassinated at the Okiti area of the town, while four others were seriously injured, allegedly due to the ongoing voters' registration exercise in the state.

Ogundele, who was a leader of the PDP in Ife-East Local Government Area of the state, was said to have been dragged to the back of his house by suspected political thugs, and shot in the stomach.

According to a son of the deceased, Adeleke, the late Ogundele was lured out of his residence at 11.30p.m by some politicians who had threatened him earlier in the day while the voters' registration exercise was going on at his Okerewe Ward II.
