- Stray bullets kill 2 girls selling recharge cards

From Emmanuel Ogoigbe, Warri

SIX people were killed yesterday by cultists and police in separate incidents, which shook Warri and its environs.

Daily Sun investigation showed that two girls were shot dead by cultists at Merogun Waterside while two of the cultists were also gunned down in a revenge mission by a vigilance group in the area.

It was also gathered that the cultists, numbering over 20, took both Iyara and Merogun communities in a commando-like style and shot sporadically.

Two girls who dealt in recharge cards were, however, not so lucky as they were hit by bullets which immediately sent them to their early graves.

The pandemonium which ensued sent scores of people running in different directions, even as most of them sustained serious wounds.

But the vigilance group in the area took up arms and confronted the cultists and, in the ensuing battle, two of the cultists were brought down immediately.

In another incident, which took place in Igbudu market, an armed bandit, was shot dead by a mobile policeman who had escorted a lady to the market.

It was gathered that the policeman, on sighting the armed bandits robbing and terrorising traders, aimed at one who met his waterloo while one was apprehended by a vigilance group in the market just as the third

Meanwhile, the cult war raging in Delta State reared its ugly head in Agbor community when suspected cultists operating in the areas allegedly killed two persons, including a pregnant woman.

The tragic accident took place around the Benin-Asaba Agbor Expressway on Tuesday, April 15, 2015.

The victims of the cultists were killed and dumped by the roadside which caused palpable tension in the community.

Local police said they arrested several suspected cult members but upon interrogation and investigation, highly-placed persons allegedly intervened to set them free.

Police sources at the divisional police headquarters, however, said officers were on the trail of the suspected cultists.

He added that two persons were arrested while the search for others continues.

In a related development, two month ago, no less than 12 people were killed by a group of cultists in Agbor and Boji-boji Owa communities of Delta State.

Among the victims were three pregnant women.
