- Twin blasts kill 12 in market

ABOUT 12 people were killed following two bomb explosions in Chibok market, south of Borno where over 200 schoolgirls were abducted by Boko Haram on April 14, 2014.

Two girls suspected to be Boko Haram bombers entered Chibok market and thereafter, a loud sound from bomb explosion was heard, a vigilante member in Chibok told Daily Sun on phone.

"Eight people died immediately," the source who was involved in the rescue exercise said.

While many people fled the market on hearing the first explosion, the second bomb went off, which caused more havoc, residents said. Daily Sun also gathered that four, out of the over 15 wounded ones, later died as rescue workers and local officials battled to take them to the hospital in neighbouring Uba town, which is about 33 kilometres away.

At least 10 people were killed and 30 injured when three suicide bombers blew themselves up in Chibok town, Borno State, the north-eastern town of Nigeria. BBC Africa reports that the bombs exploded at three different places yesterday morning.

But, Mr. Ayuba, a former resident of Chibok town told British Broadcasting Corporation (BBC) Africa that five suicide bombers entered the town yesterday morning and three of them managed to detonate their explosives.

The two others are at large. The resident said the attack took place despite the presence of security forces in the town.
