A robbery suspect, Lukman Jamiu, has said he thanked God for sparing his life during a fatal operation. He was being interrogated at the Special Anti-Robbery Squad (SARS) of the Lagos State Police Command for series of alleged armed robberies.

He told Daily Sun of how he cheated death in what he described as his last. "That operation was really fatal and my last operation. We went to the Ayobo area of the state and succeeded in snatching a handbag from a lady. He fled on a motorcycle with his accomplice, simply called Ifeanyi, who was on the back seat.

"When we got to the Pipeline area, we snatched another bag. But a man who was driving out from a compound saw what happened and chased up. He was speeding too much because, it was early in the morning and there was no traffic. We sped so much, but the man didn't give up. Suddenly, he knocked us down with his car.

"I was unconscious for sometime. I later woke up to find myself in a police station. Well, I was lucky to be alive today, but Ifeanyi died on the spot.
