

Five years after, her village suffered another bloody attack at midnight by harbingers of death also suspected to be herdsmen, which left six persons dead and several homes razed. Her father's houses including an apartment where the family stored food items were set ablaze.

Unknown to her parents who fled the home as soon as the guns boomed without their daughter, Esther was trapped in one of the houses but later escaped unhurt by providence. When they eventually reunited after the dust settled, they relocated to Sot, a village in Vwang district, Jos South Local Government Area of Plateau State, to stay alive.