THE Anifowose family of Ikorodu are grieving over the loss of their son, Kudus, a JSS 1 student, who was declared missing since October 14. His dismembered body was found yesterday at a compound in Ikorodu.

A 17-year-old boy and his grandmother were arrested by the police.

Kudus' body was discovered at the friend's compound, but he denied any involvement. The grand mother has since been released by the police.

Family members are alleging ritual killing, asking the police to investigate the matter properly.

"The way things are going, we suspect that some people in high places could be involved in this killing. When the compound was sealed by the police, some people came in company with the boy's grandmother saying they want to take certificate from the compound. Thanks to the OPC that refused them entry. We strongly suspect that they attempted to come in to clean their mess. We are not going to take this lying down. This is one killing too many," Taofeek Anifowose, father of the boy said.
