

One feared dead as thugs attack Igboho's residence in Ibadan

From Oluseye Ojo,
Ibadan

ARMED thugs yesterday attacked the Sims, Ibadan residence, of Yoruba nation activist, Chief Sunday Adeyemo, fondly called Sunday Igboho, with one person feared dead, while some others said to be Igboho's followers also sustained varying degrees of injuries.

Sunday Sun gathered that the Igboho's house that was attacked is the same that the security agencies led by the Department of State Services (DSS) raided on July 1, 2021, during which two persons were killed in the house and more than 10 others arrested and taken to Abuja.

It was gathered that the attack on Igboho's house followed the fracas that broke out between people suspected to be members of the Oyo State Park Management System (PMS) and a group known as Federal Boys.

The pandemonium, which started two days ago, has caused serious unrest and public disturbance at areas such as Soka, Oremeji, and Agugu, the capital of Oyo State.

A leader of the Federal Boys, simply identified as 'Kokoro' was said to have been killed by the attackers, which fueled the crisis on Saturday.

But a source said one of the parties tried to take total control of parks in Soka, Agugu and Oremeji areas, where 'Igboho's boys' have allegedly been collecting money from commercial motorcyclists, and tricyclists, especially at Soka Junction.

Some of the supporters of Igboho, who put up a resistance against the attack, as gathered, were injured either with machete or firearms.

• Continued on www.sunnewsonline.com