A teacher and mother of two has been arrested by detectives attached to the Homicide of the State Criminal Investigation and Intelligence Department (SCIID), Panti, Yaba State, for allegedly killing her husband.

The suspect, Bukola, allegedly murdered her husband, Abbey, at the Igbogbo, Ikorodu the Lagos metropolis. The suspect, a teacher in a private school, who was said to have killed her husband to death on Wednesday, reportedly said that she never meant to kill her husband. Abbey was said to have been beating his wife when she grabbed a knife to defend herself. Abbey was further alleged to have attempted to wrest the knife from her and in the process the knife pierced his stomach. A source said:

“The woman had always been subjected to a series of beating by her husband before 1 unfortunate incident. When the beating was becoming too much, the woman’s paren her to divorce him. “Bukola, however, preferred to stay with her husband because of 1 she has for him and their children. It is known on our street that the couple was alwa fighting and the husband was fond of beating her on the slightest provocation.”

A resident, identified simply as Adeolu, said: “We rushed Abbey to a private hospital. on the way to the hospital. In the past, whenever they were fighting, Bukola used to r the house. But on that fateful Wednesday, Abbey locked the door, to prevent Bukola f escaping as he prepared to beat her. We always used to intervene during their fights. deceased and his wife are in their early thirties.”

Detectives from the Igbogbo Police Division have arrested Bukola, while the remains had been deposited at the Ikorodu General Hospital’s mortuary. The state Police Pub Relations Officer (PPRO), SP Chike Oti, said the suspect had been arrested and transf SCIID.
