

Gateman, neighbour murder financial analyst, steal his car

Published 2 days ago on November 11, 2019

By Correspondents

A

yet-to-be-identified gateman has allegedly killed his 26-year-old boss, Segun Afolabi, a financial analyst at Gbagada area of Lagos State and attempted to take his property.

The victim, a former president of Nigeria Economics Students Association of Covenant University, was allegedly murdered on November 4, by his gateman.

Before his death, Afolabi had on several occasions given financial support to the gateman.

The gateman connived with one of Afolabi's neighbours, who showed interest in the car the deceased bought a week ago, to kill his boss.

After successfully killing Afolabi, they wrapped his body in duvet, placed him in the boot of the new car and later dumped it in front of Gbagada General Hospital, while they drove off.

The gateman was said to have later sent his wife to Afolabi's house to steal all his valuables. The three suspects were later nabbed when they were flagged down at a police checkpoint in Edo State on November 5.

When contacted on the incident, the Lagos State Police Public Relations Officer (PPRO), DSP Bala Elkana, said he didn't have any brief on the case at press time.

He, however, promised to link up with Edo State Police Command to get further information on the matter.

RELATED TOPICS:

UP NEXT

NSCDC officials kill cyclist for overtaking their van

DON'T MISS

Domestic servants flee with celebrity's N243m jewellery

YOU MAY LIKE