

I Killed, Threw My Baby Into The River To Cover My Shame –Woman

Taiwo Jimoh

December 19, 2024

4 minute read

Delta Commissioner of Police, CP Femi Abaniwonda

SHARE

Murder

A middle aged woman, Blessing Ibuku, has been arrested by officers of the Delta State Police Command, months old baby into the river in Delta State.

The mother was also at the station when the remains of the baby was brought in and she confirmed that

During investigations by the police, the mother of the child then confessed that she was the one who threw because of shame.

"I threw my baby into the river because of my friends and some girls in my community, who were making fun of me that was why I threw him into the river.

"After I threw him into the river, I went to the police station to report that my child was stolen. It was during the investigation that I discovered I was the owner of the baby and was arrested immediately for murder and detained at the station.

"The man that got me pregnant didn't take responsibility for the baby, that was why I went to my parents. My father didn't take responsibility of it, I begged them to help me.

"My parents accepted me and took care of me till I gave birth to the baby, but some of my friends and some people in my community made fun of me that my son didn't have a father, it was not my intention to do it. I did it out of frustration."

Enter your email

Sign up

My parents were in pain. "I am the first child of my parents, they never abused me for getting pregnant, but they should forgive me of my sin.

Even if I am released today I don't think I can face my parents and brothers because of what I did. "I am a People kept asking me at the station if I knew what the child would become in life. I sincerely regret my actions. I have sinned against God."