Awidow, Salomi Benjamin, has been found dead on her farm in Kafin Tafawa, a community on the outskirts of Bauchi metropolis.

The tragic incident has sparked widespread concern and outrage.

According to her son, Simeon, Salomi left home for her farm around 8 a.m. but never returned, prompting a search that ended with the discovery of her lifeless body in the evening.

Neighbours and community members have condemned the killing, describing it as "tragic and senseless." Alex Markus, a neighbor, praised the prompt response of the Yelwa Divisional Police Officer, but urged authorities to do more to uncover those responsible.

This incident comes amid a backdrop of recent violent crimes in Bauchi, including the murder of a polytechnic student, Samuel Mbami, who was stabbed to death during an armed robbery attack at an off-campus lodge.

The Bauchi State Police Command said they have arrested suspects in connection with the incident and assured the public of their commitment to ensuring justice.
