

Lagos University Shuts Staff School over Death of Student

The Lagos State University of Science and Technology (LASUSTECH) has announced the indefinite closure of its staff school LASUSTECH International Secondary School (LISS), over the death of a student who was involved in a motor accident.

This comes days after the institution confirmed the death of the student, identified as AbdulRahman Dauda, who was allegedly chased to his death by an unnamed class teacher recently in the Ikorodu area of Lagos State.

In a statement yesterday, the university's management noted that the school had been closed forthwith due to the unfortunate incident".

It noted that the "period of closure will be used to restructure and reposition the school", while "students will be engaged with online learning"

Following a viral video of a woman who identified herself as AbdulRahman's mother as she staged a lone protest to demand justice for her son, the university's Public Relations Officer, Lanre Kunye, confirmed that the matter "is already in court".

Also, an official statement from the LASUSTECH International School said the school and Nigerian Police have commenced investigations.
