

Teacher killed protecting pupils!

Stray bullet during ratings, warders shootout snuffed life out of him*

SUNBO KOLAPO

FOR Oluwafemi Peters, Wednesday, 14 December started like any other day. He woke up, dressed and headed for Assurance Nursery and Primary School, Kirikiri, Lagos, where he was a class teacher. He must have been full of expectation ahead of Christmas. But, about noon that day, trouble started in the neighbourhood which houses the nation's most popular prisons, Kirikiri Maximum Prisons. A clash had broken out between the prison warders and naval personnel from the neighbouring Navy Town in the corpse had been deposited at the General Hospital, Lagos Island mortuary by the police. Sobamiro alleged that the police said they needed N30,000 to conduct autopsy before they could release it for burial.

Oluwafemi's parents, Mr and Mrs. Isaac Peters, were in mourning mood when Sunday Vanguard visited their No.3, Akere Street, Kirikiri residence, Friday. The mother, a caterer, said she was at work Wednesday when somebody called her to inform her that her son had been shot dead. The bereaved father lamented that the life of his son had been cut down prematurely. Mr Isaac Peters, the
