Murder of A-Ibom traditional ruler: police arrest suspects

By Tommy Solomon

Posted to the Web: Tuesday, July 10, 2007

UYO — AKWA Ibom State Police Command says it has arrested suspects linked to the murder of the traditional ruler and village head of Ikot Udo Enang in Ikono government area of the state.

The traditional ruler, Chief Nelson Bassey Etuk, was murdered last month in the village when he went to tap palm wine.

Police source said after the suspects committed the heinous crime, they deposited the body of the traditional ruler in the swamp and went home.

But the State Police Public Relations Officer, Mr. Gabriel Ngban, told newsmen in Uyo that the police were working hard to unveil the identity of persons who murdered the traditional ruler. “We are now in a position to confirm that some suspects linked to the murder of the late Chief Etuk have actually been picked up and are now being interrogated. At the end, the guilty ones will be charged while the innocent ones will be released”, Ngban stated.

The Police Public Relations Officer warned the public that it was unacceptable for them to take laws into their hands by engaging in any form of extra-judicial killings.

The Police, he said, were prepared more than ever before to ensure that perpetrators of heinous crimes were made to face the full weight of the law.
