SSS student drowns in Lagos river

Written by Evelyn Usman
Monday, 13 October 2008

THE body of a Senior Secondary School 3 (SSS) student who drowned weekend in a river at Onireke area of Lagos has been recovered by the Marine Police. The student identified as Saviour Obisi was reported to have gone to the river in the company of his friends, at about 2:25pm on Saturday to have a quick bath when tragedy struck.

There were two accounts as to how the late Saviour met his sudden death that fateful day. A version of the account said Saviour who was just learning how to swim, had a bet with his friends on his ability to swim to the deep portion of the river while another account said they were having a swimming competition when all of a sudden he was discovered to be missing, following which an alarm was raised.

Help reportedly came hours later, as local divers combed the river in futile effort. His bloated body was said to have been recovered later in the evening by Marine policemen who were contacted.

His remains, according to the Lagos State Police Public Relations Officer, Mr. Frank Mba, had been deposited in the mortuary.
