Nigeria: Cultists Invade Varsity, Kill One Student, Injure Others

Vanguard (Lagos)21 October 2008

Posted to the web 21 October 2008

Kolade Larewaju

THE permanent site of the Olabisi Onabanjo University was thrown into confusion yesterday morning, as six armed men suspected to be cultists invaded the institution resulting in the death of one student while several others were injured.

The suspected cultists were said to have stormed the Faculty of Social Sciences, shooting sporadically as students and workers of the institution scampered for safety.

Hundreds of students receiving lectures were thrown out of the lecture halls as a result of the incident said to have been a clash between two rival cult groups.

Banks operating within the University community shut down for business while all other people operating business centres took to their heels.

A victim of the incident, a female student said to have been shot was reported to have died while being rushed to Olabisi Onabanjo University Teaching Hospital, in Sagamu.

Student Union leaders, Adedeji Adewale and Adeniji Seun confirmed the incident to newsmen in a telephone conversation but said that they could not confirm whether any life was lost during the incident.
