The tragic incident which threw the rustic Azikoro settlement into mourning occurred last Friday when the deceased reportedly received a phone call which the wife suspected was from one of his lovers.

The wife's suspicion and anger over the phone call the source said, might have been fuelled by his alleged absence from home for two days.

“After returning late to his matrimonial home he received a phone call which the wife suspected was coming from his girlfriend and attempted to stop him from answering it”, the source added.

Consequently, a scuffle ensued and the deceased ordered his wife to move out of the house with her belongings, the source further said.

Angered by the wife's refusal to comply with his order the deceased was said to have reached for a kitchen knife ostensibly to frighten her but she was adamant.

Immediately he dropped the knife, the wife was said to have picked the said knife and stabbed the husband on the chest.

The loud cry of the husband for help attracted neighbours who rushed to the scene and took him to the health facility in the community where he was confirmed dead.

This is what happen when you corner a lady on the street and awhile she become your wife. A home where there is no love respect and above all the fear of God is like a sitting bomb that is just waiting for the right time to explode.

@TERRY4BRANDY,

I would like to let you know that I do not need any help from someone whose writing revealed his ignorance about the things of God to critique what the Blessed Holy Spirit has led me to write for the blessing and edification of the reader.

The things of infinite God cannot be comprehended by using your finite mind or peanut brain but ONLY by revelation, faith, and truth illuminated and led by the Holy Spirit.

Next time you want to critique the things of God, pray and ask the Holy Spirit(if you have One) to lead you into truth, before you make something else out of yourself as you have displayed in your comment .
God bless you.
