Confirming the incident before her re-deployment, the former Police Public Relations Officer, PPRO, Mrs. Joy Elemoko, said the suspects were helping the police in the investigation.

Vanguard gathered that the suspected ritualists laid ambush for the hapless woman when she was heading back home from her farm at about 9a.m. and decapitated her.

It was also gathered that "the suspected ritualists quickly scampered into safety and abandoned the decapitated head when they heard the voice of another woman who was passing through the lonely path."

Narrating the gory tale to anxious newsmen that besieged the area, the late woman's son, Mr. Monday Okorie, recalled that it was the woman who raised alarm that attracted other villagers to the scene.
