

in Ogun state were said to have been killed this year.

Very recently, 26-year-old, Samuel Ogunkoya got killed after one of the pipes affixed to the company's 'actrus pumping machine' fell and smashed his head.

It was learnt that the vehicle, which housed the machine, had developed a mechanical fault about a month before the incident and some workers were said to have reported the fault, but the management turned the deaf hear. It was gathered that the vehicle was brought back on a particular Monday by the mechanic who had gone with the vehicle for repair about four days earlier.

The machine was being used to mould concrete bricks when one of the steel pipes of the machine fell and landed on Ogunkoya's head who wanted to pick the charger for the remote control of the vehicle.

Continues on page 7