

Caterer dies in fight over cake

ON JUNE 7, 2016 8:04 AMIN NEWSCOMMENTS

By Esther Onyegbula

A misunderstanding over touching a cake baked by his friend has led to the death of Onyeka Jackson, who was reportedly stabbed to death by his colleague, Daniel Okorie, in Iyana Isashi area of Lagos, on May 24.

It was gathered that after the close of work on the said day, Onyeka trailed the 26-year-old Daniel to his house at 102, Iyana-Isashi area, over the misunderstanding caused by the cake-touching incident.

He reportedly banged on Daniel's door until he opened and an argument ensued, which later degenerated into fisticuffs at a nearby bus stop.

When Vanguard got to the scene of the incident at Iyana Isashi, traces of dried blood were still visible on the ground, leading to the suspect's apartment.