Palm wine tapper murdered in Enugu community

ON OCTOBER 12, 2016 11:00 PM / IN NEWS / COMMENTS

By Chidi Adonu

ENUGU—An unmasked gunman Tuesday night killed a palm wine tapper, Mr John Eke at Imufu, Enugu Ezike in Igboeze North Local Government Area of Enugu State.

Sources said that Eke was killed by a man who walked into the room where the deceased was discussing with his aged mother and shot him several times. He died before being rushed to hospital.

According to the sources, the deceased was freed about six months ago after over two years in prison custody, over the murder of the head of the community's vigilante group, late Chukwudi Omeh and had been living in solitude since then.

However, the sources further said that late Chukwudi was also, a student of the University of Nigeria, Nsukka, UNN, at the time of his untimely death, pointing out that some cult groups who attended his burial vowed to avenge his killing.

Eke's lifeless body was still lying in his late father's compound where he was murdered even as the incident was said to have been reported to the police in the area.
