

By Evelyn Usman & Jefferson Okeke

Fate has played an unkind one in the Orosoye family, following the gruesome killing of their bread winner, Adegoke (42) by a bullet allegedly from some policemen, in the nation's Federal Capital Territory, Abuja.

How it happened

Late Adegoke, a plumbing engineer, reportedly left where he had gone to work for a family around Wuse area of Abuja on Thursday, August 27, 2015, heading for his Soka home along Airport road, when the unexpected happened. Crime Guard gathered that while driving home, policemen at Area 1 shopping complex, flagged his vehicle down but he refused to stop, an action that allegedly led to the policemen releasing bullets on the moving vehicle. One of the bullets was said to have hit Adegoke in the neck, thereby forcing the car to stop abruptly.

Meanwhile, apprehension had set in, back in Owode, Ijako area of Ogun state, where his wife Oluwatosin resides with their five children, after several calls to her husband's telephones were not answered. She was said to have contacted her husband's mechanic, one Rotimi in Abuja, who informed that he had also not seen Adegoke for two weeks then.

Wife opens up

Narrating how news of his demise was eventually broken, devastated Oluwatosin said: "The last time I spoke with my husband was on August 25th 2015, during which he told me he would be coming to see us at the end of the month. I called again on 27th but the phone was busy. By the time I dialled his number on August 28, 2015, it was completely switched off." Tension heightened after his mechanic said that my husband brought one of his cars two weeks before then, to his workshop for repairs but he had