herdsmen killings

Vanguard gathered that the couple, Mr. Kwaghaondo Ugber, and his wife, Mne, were killed in an ambush by suspected herdsmen on Anyiin Road, at Tse Adendem village, on their way to Anyiin town.

According to a relation of the victims, Bem Ugber, the couple had boarded a motorbike from lorza village, heading to Anyiin.

He said: “We gathered from the bike rider that they were ambushed close to Tse Adendem village on Anyiin Road by armed herdsmen, who shot the rider on the hand and after they all fell down, the rider managed to escape into the bush, but my uncle and his wife were not so lucky.

“We reported the matter to the Police after we got the information. Their remains were retrieved and because of the manner they were killed, we buried them immediately in my village, Tse Hwer in a Logo Local Government Area.”

...in Guma, Ushongo

Armed herdsmen were also reported to have attacked Tse Shitenger in Uvir council ward of Guma Local Government area of the state, killing one Azegeor Shitenger and also took one Mrs. Yonov Shitenger hostage.

According to a source in the area, the attackers stormed the village early Sunday morning and left many with injuries while many others were unaccounted for.

Meanwhile four persons were also at the weekend burnt alive, while over 40 others suffered varying degrees of burns when a petroleum-laden tanker exploded into flames at Gbatse village in Ushongo Local Government Area of the state.

The inferno razed several motorbikes, houses and farmlands in the community.

According to an eyewitness, “the incident happened around 9:30 Sunday. The ill-fated truck crashed and tumbled when the driver of the truck tried to avoid a pothole.

“Minutes later, people rushed to the scene of the accident and started scooping petrol from the truck. It was while they were doing that, that the truck exploded into a huge ball of flames.

“Four persons were burnt beyond recognition, while many others sustained severe burns. On hearing the unfortunate incident, Governor Samuel Ortom directed that all the victims be moved to the Benue State University Teaching Hospital, BSUTH, for treatment.”

When Vanguard visited the BSUTH, the Chief Medical Director of the hospital, Dr. Terlumun Swende, lamented that the incident happened when health workers were on strike nationwide.

His words: “Since when the governor gave his directive and the victims were brought here yesterday, I had to bring together our medical team to save their lives. As you can see, they are being attended to. It is a serious issue.”
