2 Boko Haram terrorists attack military base, abduct IDPs in Borno

BOKO Haram terrorists reportedly attacked Kukawa Local Government, a town in Northern Borno State.

According to sources, a military base was targeted during the attack and an unspecified number of civilians may have been abducted.

The attack, which occurred on Tuesday, comes barely a week after the first set of villagers, who have been displaced for years were returned home to be resettled.

Kukawa, a border town on the fringes of Lake Chad, has been a military zone, until the recent return of the Internally Displaced Persons, IDPs.

The controversial Baga town where Borno State Governor, Babagana Zulum, was attacked is in Kukawa Local Government Area, 40 kilometers apart.

Zulum during that visit had personally inspected infrastructure and the security ambience before giving approval for the return of civilians.

Community leaders were said to have conducted a head count in order to present an official report with the correct number of missing persons.
