

Imo

6 police stations burnt, 2 police, Army killed in Imo

• Many Local government headquarters set ablaze

5

Over six police stations have been burnt in Imo state, just as two police officers as well as Army officers were also killed in the violent attacks by hoodlums in and around the state.

The Imo state commissioner of Police, Isaac Akinmoyede, disclosed this at the police headquarters in Owerri, while explaining the attacks by hoodlums in the state in the name of EndSARs protests.

"So far, six police stations have been burnt, two police officers have been killed and two Army officers were also killed. Also some local government areas have been burnt," Police commissioner said.

He added that the curfew imposed in the state was targeted at stopping the ongoing attacks by hoodlums on public institutions.

Vanguard gathered so far that the number of places where the police stations were burnt included Umuneke police station in Ngor Okpala local government, Anara police station in Isiala Mbano local government, Enyigugu police division in Aboh Mbaise local government area.

Nworieubi police station in Mbaitoli local government area, Orji Divisional police station in Owerri North local government area as well as Njaba local government area.

As of the time of filling this report, some of the local government headquarters burnt were Orlu, Isiala Mbano, Ehime Mbano.

Benue