

In Lere local government, security agencies reported that some bandits from a neighboring state who specialized in stealing livestock were also killed through mob action.

According to the report, the bandits were chased and overpowered at Domawa village where three of them met their end in the hands of the mob.