

2 I didn't share in N2m loot as gang members ran away with it after the operation

- Security guard who organised robbery laments
- Says 'I regret the killing of my colleague'

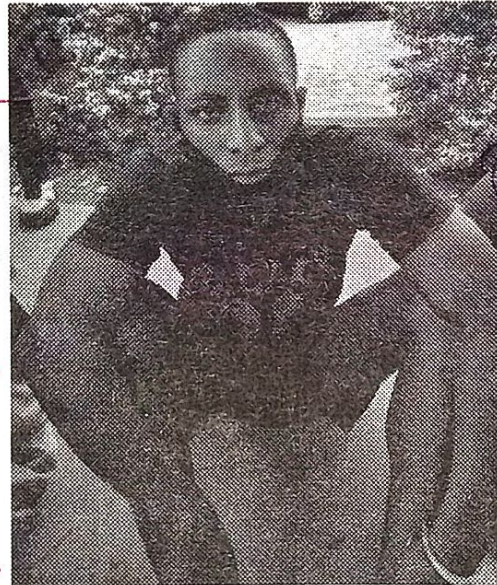

By Dayo Johnson

AKURE—A security guard with a filling station in Ondo town, Ondo State, Abiodun Osuntimehin, who organised a five-man robbery gang to attack the station has regretted not sharing in the N2 million loot as the gang members ran away after the operation.

Another guard, working at the same filling station, was shot dead while the gang made away with N2 million from the vault in the filling station.

Osuntimehin told Vanguard after he was paraded alongside 14 other suspects by the state police command in Akure that he regretted the killing of his colleague during the robbery operation.

The suspect, who said he earned N25,000 monthly as a security guard at the station, lamented that he could not share out of the loot as the gang members were unreachable after the operation.

The suspect.

According to him, the gang members ran away with the loot before he was arrested.

He said: "I now regret the killing of my colleague. I did not share out of the money as the gang members ran away.

"It was my boss that got me arrested. I knew there would be money at the station that day so I informed the gang members."

He was arrested by police detectives and during the investigation, he confessed to the crime.

3 Man denies killing wife

Meanwhile, one Gbenro Adetuyi paraded by the Police for allegedly strangling his wife to death over N150,000 alert she received has denied killing her.

It would be recalled that their five-year-old daughter raised the alarm over the killing of her mother by her father.

But Gbenro told newsmen that there was no reason for him to kill his wife, adding that his daughter could have said anything but that he was innocent of the allegation.

According to him, "I did not kill my wife. She died in her sleep. She was a herbalist while I am a Christian. My daughter can say anything but I did not kill my wife."